NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

M. BRADDY & GEO. O. GAYLORD

Are the wide awake Racket Store people of the city by the sea. We have in the last month received a goodly sum of hard cash from the damage we received by fire in Winston, N. C., 1892. With that money and other cash we had on hand the senior member of the firm is now in New York in the interest of the one price cash house of Wilmington, where he intends to buy by far the largest and nicest stock of goods it has ever been our fortune to show to our many friends and customers. We can save you money on all of your purchases in Dry Goods, Notions, Shoes, Clothing and Millinery. There is no one can truthfully say we do not carry what the people want. The generous public say we do and prove it by their liberal patronage. It is the common cry of all advertisers to say our stock is the lowest in price. I say this, we have not the place in this paper to quote prices on hardly any portion of our stock, but say this—bring from any house, after jewing them all you please samples and we guarantee our first price to be as low or lower than theirs. If you are not already a customer of our store we respectfully invite you to call and see us. Our add is not very large in this grand old paper, but our store has more shelf room than any store in the city by 40 per cent., and every shelf and every place is completely filled from floor to cealing with new, desirable and stylish goods. When you need Dress Goods and Trimmings remember the Racket. When in need of Shoes come to the Racket. When in need of Clothing and Underwear for Men and Boys the Racket have them. Carpets, Matting and Oil Cloths they are on the third floor of the Racket Store. We ask you to come to us for bargains at the Racket Store, on Front street, opposite the Market House.

BRADDY & GEO. GAYLORD,
Proprietors.

OUTLINES.

Proceedings in Congress yesterday. —— Movements of United States warships. —— The railroad wreck in Mexico—total number of deaths seventy; five more of the injured are expected to die. —— Terrible boiler explosion in a saw-mill in Ohio. —— Beaten by White-caps—two brothers unmercifully whipped in Yadkin county, N. C. —— Southern Railroad Company—new contracts with other roads. —— Honolulu advices—the ex-Queen sentenced to five years' imprisonment and $5,000 fine; others sentenced. —— The revolution in Cuba—a fight reported. —— China and Japan—it is rumored that peace negotiations will be a failure. —— Homicide in Georgia. —— A large schooner driven ashore on Cobb's Island. —— Flour mills burned in Illinois. —— A disastrous fire at Salina, Kansas. —— Prize-fighting in England. —— Chicago grain and provision market. —— Cotton spots and futures. —— New York markets: Money on call nominally 2@3½ per cent.; cotton quiet; middling gulf 5⅝ cts; middling uplands 5⅝ cts; Southern flour quiet and steady; common to fair extra $1.90@3.75; good to choice do. $3.80@3.95; wheat—spot dull and ½@½c lower; No. 2 red in store and at elevator 58¼@58¾c; afloat 60@60¼ cts; corn—spot dull and firm; No. 2 at elevator 49@49½c; afloat 50½ cents; spirits turpentine firm and quiet at 38½@38¾ cents; rosin dull and firm; strained common to good $1.40@1.45.

A South Dakota man says he knows who stole the Fair will, and for $15,000 he will tell. That man evidently doesn't run an information bureau for nothing.

In Louisville the Indianapolis man is regarded as hog-proof. Four car loads of hogs which were recently condemned by the Louisville inspector, were forthwith shipped to Indianapolis.

A Kansas electrician has succeeded in establishing electrical communication with a vessel anchored several miles out at sea. He made his original experiments on a "prairie schooner."

Hawaii is progressing in civilization under the rule of the "Sons of the Missionaries." The gallows has be erected to take the place of the old chop block, so that the condemned criminal may swing off gracefully without feeling hacked.

The fact that several of the leading Western railroads have placed large orders for rolling stock, etc., indicates, in the opinion of the Chicago Railway Gazette, that the railroad managers are looking for a revival in business and are preparing for it.

Louise Michel, the Anarchist, is reported dangerously ill in London. Louise was dangerously well before she became dangerously ill. She was when in good health capable of a good deal of devilment and seemed to enjoy it.

Here's another romance spoiled. It turns out that that fellow who was recently pardoned from the penitentiary in Missouri to take possession of a great inheritance, fell heir to $62.50, and a brother gobbled that up and lit out before the other fellow got out of the pen.

The recent municipal election cost the city of Philadelphia $115,901.95, which does not include what it cost the hustlers who were running the election. The fact that it cost only $115,901.95 shows that Philadelphia has an eye to economy. In more extravagant cities it might have cost $115,902.

It never got so hot that it wasn't hotter somewhere and some time, and never so cold that it wasn't ditto. We are now told that it was so cold in Holland in 1554 that the old fellows carried their wine around in their pockets in frozen chunks, and when they wanted a drink they took out a slice and melted it down.

A Philadelphia paper asks "why not have a Lexow Committee?" The presumable reason probably is that the Republican hustlers who have been running that city so long, enjoying the fame and perquisites they have won, don't care to be pestered by the questions that meddlesome people might ask as to the whenceness of their accumulated lucre.

The Legislature of Pennsylvania has appropriated $100,000 for the printing and distribution of a book on birds, and now it is proposed to follow this up by equipping every public school in the State with 350 photographic illustrations, at an estimated cost of $300,000, so that the little chips may cultivate acquaintance with the birds without climbing trees and robbing nests.

The Rothschild family is said to be wearing out at the head, and that there is only one of them who is really competent to manage their business. The combined wealth of the family is $2,000,000,000. Two of the younger members of the family have committed suicide and a third has tried to. This justifies the inference that when a man accumulates more than two or three hundred millions he doesn't find much solid comfort in his money.

Chicago people have a splendid opportunity to get out of that town, as competiton between the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe Railroads has reduced the fare to San Francisco to $5.

"WILMINGTON IN THE FORTIES."

I have read with much interest the articles appearing in the Messenger under the above caption, and the mention of Mr. Loring's name in the last issue in connection with various newspapers published here, recalls an incident of his life while he was a resident of Wilmington which is not, I apprehend, familiar to many of the present generation. Let me say, however, that after he had disposed of his paper here he purchased the Raleigh Standard, then owned and edited by Phil. White, and assumed control of its columns. The Standard was the organ of the Democratic party in North Carolina, and its influence was very great in that organization. Mr. Loring improved the paper vastly and increased its circulation and influence by the manner in which he conducted it, for he was well posted on the politics of the country and was a vigorous and forceful writer. He continued to control it for some years, but some time in the forties a difference arose between him and some of the leaders of his party which could not be healed, and he disposed of the paper to the late W. W. Holden and retired from its management. He was a short man but remarkably stout, and would weigh I should suppose about two hundred and fifty pounds. He had a magnificent voice, deep-toned, full and sonorous, and as a member of the old Thalian Association used frequently to appear upon the stage of the old theatre in amateur theatricals. He bore a striking resemblance to the elder Booth (Junius Brutus) and in the character of Richard the Third would have divided honors with great actors. He had a similar weakness in his younger days to the one in which that eminent tragedian indulged though it was never carried to such an excess and was entirely given up as he became older.

It is remembered that on one occasion while rendering a very spirited representation of Richard, in fact, so spirited that the orchestra, which consisted of but two musicians—old Henry Sampson and Philip Bazadere, who used to torture the violin excrutiatingly—became so nervous, in fact so frightened, that they could scarcely keep their seats, for he seemed to play directly at them and to hurl his denunciations upon their heads alone. The climax came in the tent scene when the ghosts of those he had murdered appeared to him in his sleep and upbraided him for the crimes of which he had been guilty; and when he started up from his restless slumber, sword in hand, and rushed to the front of the stage in an agony of terror, he made one sweep of his glittering weapon and decapitated more than half of the foot-lights, which cousisted of the ordinary tallow candle, as it was long before the era of kerosene or gas. There is a limit to human endurance, and that limit was then reached by the two musicians, for in a twinkling two pairs of heels were for a moment visible in the air, as both fiddlers cleared the railing around the orchestra and rushed hatless from the building without pausing to cast one longing, lingering look behind.

During their absence a wag, the late M. London, Esq., who was enjoying the fun, quickly smeared the bows of their violins with one of the tallow candles which the irate tragedian had chopped off, and when the musicians returned, which they soon did, and resumed their seats he commenced to yell, "music!" "music!" in which the entire audience uproariously joined. They seized their instruments and drew the bows fiercely across the strings, but no sound followed—they were as mute as "the harp that once through Tara's halls the soul of music shed." Again they made the attempt, and with a like result—silence only, and "nothing more;" but examining into the cause of their utter failure to make "concord of sweet sounds," the practical joke that had been played upon them was plainly manifest. Without a word or even an exclamation, they gathered up their instruments and marched off with great dignity of manner, but with an expression of the most intense disgust depicted upon their countenances, and there was no more music to entertain the performance that evening.

Mr. Loring, subsequent to his retirement from the Standard, embarked in several newspaper enterprises, but was not successful in any way. He finally located in Goldsboro, where he edited a small weekly paper, and there he died, at quite an advanced age and in straightened circumstances. When he controlled the Standard he was certainly a power in the politics of the State. He was a strong partisan and very bitter at times against his political opponents, but he became more conservative as age crept upon him, and those heated controverses in which he so frequently indulged are of the past now, and have long since been forgotten. SENEX.

S. A. L. Boycott.

The Charlotte News, Friday, says: "The boycott on the Seaboard Air Line road by the Southern Passenger and Steamship Association goes on to-day. The injunction secured against the W. & C., at Atlanta, makes the boycott at that terminal point amount to nothing for the time being, but at Charlotte, Wilmington, Raleigh and other points, the boycott will be in force. The Seaboard Air Line officials do not appear to be at all disturbed over the prospect.

The Improved No. 9.

Katz & Polvogt have opened up their machine department on the second floor of their establishment, No. 116 Market street. They have just opened 100 New Improved No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machines. This is unquestionably the best machine in the world, and with the advantage of buying them on the terms Katz & Polvogt are offering them, everybody should have one—i. e., ten dollars the first payment, and three dollars, payable monthly, each subsequent payment.

The New No. 9 can be run with a single strand of cotton thread, which shows how light running the machine is. Leave your orders for a machine at Katz & Polvogt's.

PROTEST AND APPEAL.

Citizens of Wilmington Meet to Protest Against the Proposed Change in City Government and Appoint a Committee to Visit Raleigh and Appeal to the Legislature.

A large and enthusiastic meeting of the most intelligent and representative citizens of Wilmington assembled in the City Court room last night for the purpose of taking action to prevent proposed amendments to the City Charter by the State Legislature.

The meeting was called to order by Col. T. W. Strange, and upon motion Mr. D. G. Worth was made Chairman and Mr. A. J. Marshall requested to act as Secretary.

Mr. J. C. Stevenson stated the object of the meeting.

Very enthusiastic speeches were made by gentlemen in the audience, and upon motion of C. E. Borden, the chairman appointed Messrs. Borden, Stevenson and Strange a committee to retire and draft resolutions, and report as quickly as possible.

During the absence of the committee the meeting was addressed by Mr. Sol. Bear, who made some very instructive remarks.

The committee returned and presented the following resolutions, which were adopted, viz:

WHEREAS, We the citizens of Wilmington, in meeting assembled, believe that the material interests of our city are seriously imperrilled by legislation now pending in the Legislature looking to the amendment of our city charter; and whereas, we are led to believe that the Legislature of North Carolina will not enact such legislation if it has a proper understanding of the nature and purpose of the same and the motives of those who are promoting it; therefore be it

Resolved, 1st. That the proposed bill is demanded by no public interest, would be a serious blow to the credit of the city, just at the time when she is about to fund her floating debt, would take control of its affairs out of the hands of the white people and tax payers, and put us at the mercy of those who are least interested in the material development of our city.

2nd. That it is solely in the interest of notoriously unscrupulous and incompetent office seekers.

Now therefore, we petition your honorable body not to pass the bill now pending or any other affecting our present charter.

Upon motion the chairman appointed Messrs. Roger Moore, Walker Taylor, J. C. Stevenson, T. D. Meares and C. E. Borden a committee to go to Raleigh at once, present the above resolutions, and do all in their power to prevent a change of the present charter.

CATHERINE KENNEDY HOME

This communication addressed to those who have so generously subscribed towards securing the Princess street property for the use of the above named charity, conveys words of thanks and gratulation that their generosity has put the management of the Home in a position which almost secures the purchase of this most desirable and appropriate dwelling. Although comparatively few have subscribed, yet the Society is almost in a position to secure the property. Shall this dearly cherished and wise effort of the ladies in charge of the Home fail for the want of $500.00?

Will not the general public come at once to the rescue and supply the deficiency?

If every one will do what they can just now, the purchase of the property will be an assured fact.

Do not let this much needed charity in our midst fail, when by raising so small a sum the beneficent and permanent end of much labor will have been secured.

People of Wilmington! Think of that beloved person whose name this charity bears, and who labored so long and faithfully among you, not only in the general benevolent work of the town, but for this especial object. For years it was her hope and wish to do the work her successors are trying now to do. This Home is to be a lasting and grateful memorial for all she did and all she was, and this fact is coupled with the other palpable fact that it is to be a permanent, beneficent and acceptable charity in this community. Will you not make one strong effort in this emergency? Send in your subscriptions as quickly and generously as you can.

A NOBLE CHARITY.

Mr. W. H. Bernard, Editor Star:

DEAR SIR—A citizen of Wilmington, who has been informed that five hundred dollars additional subscription will enable the Ladies' Benevolent Society to secure the property desired for the Catharine Kennedy Home, authorizes me to say that he will contribute one hundred dollars, if the remainder is raised by next Saturday.

Will you kindly insert this and aid this noble charity? Yours,

ROGER MOORE.

Several citizens are agitating the organization of a first-class base ball team this Summer—partly professionals—and to form a State League, so as to guarantee visiting teams. They propose to fix up the old Seaside grounds. The management will be in charge of a stock company.

COAST LINE CHANGES.

The New Division Agent at the Northeastern Railroad Headquarters.

Assistant Traffic Manager H. M. Emerson, of the Atlantic Coast Line system, was in the city yesterday on business. A few days ago the News and Courier announced that the Coast Line had determined to establish in this city a division freight and passenger agency, and that Mr. J. M. Morris, formerly freight agent at the Charleston station, had been appointed to the new office.

The order creating the department went into effect yesterday, and it was in this connection that Mr. Emerson came down to the city. He said that the Coast Line had long felt that the Charleston people would be better satisfied if the system would establish a division of its headquarters here. He was confident that the appointment of Mr. Morris as division freight and passenger agent was one which would give general satisfaction.

At the Northeastern Road's general freight office yesterday the officials formally entered upon the discharge of their new duties. Mr. Morris became division freight and passenger agent, Mr. West succeeded Mr. Morris in the freight office as agent, and Mr. Grenneker became the soliciting agent of the Coast Line in Charleston.

The New Stock Company.

The Southern Stock Mutual Insurance Company wrote the thousand dollars of insurance yesterday on properties of the very best character in this city. The agency has only been established here seven days, and satisfactory work for an entire month has already been accomplished. We have a thrifty community when a good thing is presented, our people take hold, and when sound insurance can be obtained at market rates with an assured prospect of a liberal return of premium, it is literally a mutual concern, in fact rather a family affair, all parties interested.—Charlotte News.

WILMINGTON, N. C.

SUNDAY MORNING, MAR. 3, 1895

"SOUND MONEY."

The organs of the money power in this country declare that the party which stands most unwaveringly by sound money will be the party that will be successful. Eastern Republicans warn their party against coquetting with or yielding in the slightest degree to the silver Republicans of the West, while the Eastern Democrats are equally zealous in warning the Democratic party against lending an ear to the demands of the silver Democrats of the West. They both declare that the great rich States of the Union, taking in the section north of the Ohio and east of the Mississippi, including, perhaps, one or two States on the other side of the Mississippi, will ignore party lines on that, and stand solidly for "sound money," and support the party which stands up most uncompromisingly for it.

The question arises right here; what is sound money, or what do they mean by it? According to the general acceptation that is sound money which passes current from hand to hand, pays the wages of labor, pays for what we buy from one another, and the debts we owe. That is sound money in the full sense of the word, as the people understand it, whether it be composed of paper, silver or gold.

But the clamorers for "sound money" mean more than that. They mean that only one kind of money shall be recognized as sound money, and that is the money which is the scarcest, the hardest to get, and so precious in their sight that very little of it is permitted to circulate among the people, but is kept hoarded in the vaults of the banks. The money that is sound enough for 65,000,000 of people, which they willingly accept for their labor or for the products of their labor, is not good enough for the sound money champions, who insist upon something better and more aristocratic, so to speak.

Their sound money is made of yellow metal which being comparatively scarce can be controlled and have its price fixed by a comparatively small number of men in both hemispheres. They can lock it up or turn it loose as they see fit and thus control the price of every piece of coin of that metal and also of everything that is bought with it. The value of every other kind of money, and of everything which is sold for money is regulated by the value they put upon the yellow coin, and thus they control not only the money of the world, but the markets of the world, the commerce of the world, the labor of the world, and their power is felt not only in the palace of the money changer, but in the humble cot of the wage-earner, and in the home of the bread and meat-producer, whose acres help to feed the world and make the bulk of its commerce. The sound money which they contend for is the money which can be the most easily controlled and manipulated by the few, who always control and manipulate it in their own interests.

There is to day and has been for years a growing protest coming from the masses in this country and in Europe against this narrow construction of sound money, this one-metal gauge of the value of all other money, which has enabled a few very rich men to control the treasuries of nations and to some extent control the destinies of these nations. These money kings are in one sense monarchs of nations and exert a more world-wide power than any nation under the sun. The world is beginning to protest, we say, against this selfish, narrow construction of "sound money" which gives the money kings supreme power and makes the world tributary to them.

Germany and Great Britain are two of the nations which put silver down and put gold up and did it at the command of the money-lenders who were mighty enough to control Parliaments and kings. These same money-lenders and associates put silver down and gold up in this country because they were mighty enough to control Congresses and Presidents The world has suffered by the selfish degradation of its greatest and most universal money metal, and hence the efforts that have been from time to time made in Europe within the past few years to get the Governments to restore silver to its rightful place in the monetary systems of the countries which had degraded it. This is the object of the monetary conference favored by the German Reichstag and by the British House of Commons in the resolution passed a few days ago.

Reduced to its essence all this contention about sound money by the money kings and their spokesmen is simply to keep the control of the money of the world in the hands of the few by practically declaring that there shall be but one kind of money, by which all other forms of currency which are permitted to perform any of the functions of money shall have their values fixed. That's what it means, and the contest over it is a contest between the millions who toil and the millions who borrow with the few who toil not, but grow rich and richer out of the interest on the money they lend.

Senator Manderson, of Nebraska, in the amendment to the General Deficiency bill offered by him Friday, struck at an abuse which ought to have been abated long ago and the surprising thing is that it has been tolerated at all, or at least without an emphatic protest. We do not know how many Senators or Representatives have their wives, daughters, sons, cousins, &c., on the pay-rolls but they are numerous enough to make this thing a scandal of which any respectable body of Legislators ought to be ashamed. The fact that the abuse has prevailed so long, and that so many indulge in it, is neither a palliation nor a justification. This nepotism goes farther than the Senate or House for it is carried into nearly all the departments of the Government, where those in control think it all right to do what the bodies entrusted with the making of the laws do, whether they think it right or not. How can any Senator or Representative condemn nepotism when he practices it and reaps the benefit of it? It is not only scandalous, but it is a shameless plunder of the people, for in many cases, and perhaps in a majority of them, the money paid to the relatives of Senators and Representatives is not earned, and is practically money given for nothing. This may and doubtless will account for the bills presented at the end of nearly every term of Congress to allow extra pay to the employes of both Houses, similar to the bill passed several days ago, which will distribute $150,000 among them.

MINOR MENTION.

S. Otho Wilson, of Wake county, is a candidate for Railroad Commissioner to succeed Hon. Thos. W. Mason. If there are any of the leading Fusionists who have not reached out for a share of the spoils since the combine triumphed, they have not been discovered. It is said that Marion Butler and others on the Populist side of the combine are becoming dissatisfied with the general run of things at Raleigh, and are coming to the conclusion that the Republicans are doing too much in fixing up the general legislation for the State and are getting the biggest slices of pie. A Populist caucus was held Thursday night, at which, according to the report as published in Friday's News and Observer, it was resolved to hold no more joint caucuses. As showing the spirit of the caucus, the News and Observer makes the following reference to Marion Butler's speech:

"The Senator spoke with emphasis, saying that he did not favor the creation of offices for men (referring to the fluke that had been made in roosting Ewart so high); that there must be at once the passage of the Code Commission bill (and general opinion put down as two, Spier Whitaker and Guthrie); that the Populists must be protected against the negro danger in the rechartering of Eastern cities; that the geological survey must stand as it is (Butler said this before, last week in a caucus speech); that the election law must undergo radical changes before becoming a law; that the distinctive policies of the Populists must be maintained, and that they must remain Populists.

"It was not concealed that Butler has felt much humiliated over the failure of his cumulation to cumulate, but he took the compromise of the two extra commissioners to be appointed by the amended bill of yesterday, as the nearest way out of the muddle. But thus far and no farther is the slogan now. Russell yesterday morning sent for a News and Observer between 4 and 5 o'clock which he knew would contain (as it did) full particulars of Wednesday night's caucus, and read it with anger. He waltzed around yesterday in a kind of vicious, ghost dance, shouting all kinds of Indian terms to help the conspiracy against Judge Meares and his criminal circuit, finishing off the afternoon in a vain three-hours closet bout with Butler, trying in desperation to change the course of things. But he retired baffled. This is settled BEYOND ALL DOUBT NOW. Last night it was tacitly agreed among the members of the caucus that the Railroad Commissioner SHALL be a Populist."

We do not attach much importance to these reports, for they may be simply a bluff to bring the Republican side of the combine to time, but still they show that the Populist side, which has felt especially sore since that Douglass business, is very far from being satisfied with the Republican manipulation at Raleigh.

The figuring in the Treasury of the United States is beyond the comprehension of the ordinary mortal, but it must be understood that a good deal of that figuring is based on speculation, on what may be more than on what is. While figures have been presented to show a probable comfortable surplus at the end of the next fiscal year the figures of actual receipts and expenditures for two thirds of the present fiscal year show that the latter exceed the former by $36,295,000. What reason is there to believe that the difference will be overcome and that the Treasury will get even much less have a surplus at the end of the next fiscal year? Germany and France are warring against American meats and Germany is imposing retaliatory duties on other American imports, while England, Germany and other wheat-importing countries are buying less wheat from us and more from Argentina. This means a reduction of our trade, and of course a reduction of imports from these countries, and that means a corresponding reduction of revenue from that source. Business may and probably will pick up some, but even with the realization of all that can be reasonably expected the outlook is not very promising for a flowing treasury for some time to come.

CURRENT COMMENT.

— Senator Ransom, after twenty-five years' service in the Senate, goes to Mexico. There would be no filibustering by the people against their departure if about three-fourths of Mr. Ransom's senatorial colleagues would go to Mexico, or even a hotter country.—Louisville Courier-Journal, Dem.

— The refusal of the House to include in the General Deficiency bill the sum of $425,000 to pay England's sealskin bill is equivalent to a declaration that Brother Jonothan is not at home and Brother John will please call again. The Bering Sea tribunal was a "bad bargain," as Mr. Sherman would say; but it must be kept, and making wry faces won't mend the matter.—Philadelphia Record, Dem.

— The passage by the Senate of the amendments to the Sundry Civil bill providing for the payment of the sugar bounties is as indefensible an act as the present incompetent and reckless Congress has committed. It was stated during the debate on the amendments that the sum to be thus taken from the Treasury would be from $5,000,000 to $8,000,000. Whether the amount be the greater or the lesser one, it will be taken out of the pockets of the consumers of sugar to put into the pockets of the growers of sugar; it will be a tax levied upon and collected from the mass of the people for the sole benefit of the few planters.—Philadelphia Ledger, Ind.

SPIRITS TURPENTINE.

— Jonesboro Journal: The gin house, cotton press, crib and two or three out-buildings belonging to Mrs. A. C. Bryan, who lives midway from here to Sanford, was destroyed by fire last night. The origin of the fire is thought to be accidental.

— Monroe Enquirer: Mr. Jack Ramsay died at his home in New Salem township on the 23ad inst., at the age of four-score years. —— Mr. Lewis Rivers, of White Store township, Anson county, died suddenly on the 21st inst., at the advanced age of 83 years.

— Salisbury Herald: A cutting, that came dangerously near being fatal, occurred at Hutchinson's distillery, in the upper part of the county, late Saturday afternoon. The cutting was done by Alf Jurney, the victim being Bomar Childress, both parties being white.

— Statesville Landmark: The Statesville cotton mill is running regularly and 70,000 yards of its product have been put upon the market. One hundred and ten looms are in operation, giving employment to fifty-three hands. It is expected to have all the 180 looms running in two or three weeks. In a few months the spindles will be put in and these, with the additional looms will give employment to a large number of people.

— Concord Times: A man on horseback rode up to the pavement in front of the furniture store yesterday and began singing. He soon attracted a crowd, and then he opened a Bible and began preaching. He preached about 15 minutes, sang another song, and departed as quietly as he came. No one knows who he is. It is said that he was tramping and preaching as he went, wherever he could get listeners, and when he got to Danville some one (Evangelist Schoolfield, is is said) gave him a horse and saddle. He said he was going to the mountains to take the gospel to those who would not come to it. He was a young man.

— Wadesboro Messenger-Intelligencer: A most distressing affair was the death of Mr Ed. DeBerry. He was killed Saturday morning by shooting himself in the head with a double-barrel breach-loading shot gun. Whether he did it intentionally or accidentally, is not known. He spoke of going to knock down cotton stalks and told his daughters, Hattie and Laura, that he'd take his gun and might kill them a bird. He then stepped out, the gun fired, and on running out the poor girls found their father lying on the frozen ground his head from his ears up, completely shot off—blood, brains and even the handkerchief he wore in his hat were blown up against and sticking to the side of the house. —— The store of C. L. Frederick & Co., at Lilesville, was robbed last Friday night. A lot of shoes, hats, clothing, &c., were stolen. One of the burglars, Will Bennet, colored, was arrested Sunday. Bennet had on a suit of the stolen clothing when apprehended. He says that John Price and Henry Johnson, both colored, were also engaged in the robbery. Price and Johnson have not yet been arrested. Bennet is now in jail.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

A STORY FOR VERY LITTLE FOLKS.

Kitty's First Lesson In Sliding on the Ice. How Fred and Will Helped.

It was a winter's day, but Fred and Will did not care for that, for they knew that they would have plenty of sliding. There was a large pond close by their grandfather's house, where numbers of people went to skate and to slide.

"And next year," said Will, "father is going to buy us some skates and teach us to skate."

"Yes," said Fred, "and this year we must have some good slides instead."

So the two little boys were very glad when their mother bade them put on their winter jackets and caps, for she was going to let them spend the day at their grandfather's.

"I want you to carry a sponge cake for your grandmother," she said.

So the boys set off, Will with a basket over his arm, and Fred carrying a large umbrella in case of a snowstorm.

Their grandmother was very much pleased to see them, and they gave her the cake that their mother had sent.

They found that a great many people had come to the pond, and there were some capital slides in one part, to which they went off.

Here they found numbers of boys and girls, and among them Mary Ellis and her little sister. Mary could both slide and skate, but today she had brought her little sister Kitty with her, to give her a lesson in sliding.

Poor Kitty had not tried to go on the ice before, and her feet slipped, and it was all she could do to stand upright. Mary held her fast, so that she could not fall, but she found it rather hard work.

So Fred and Will each took one of Kitty's arms and gently pulled her along, while Mary went behind and told Kitty not to be afraid.

"Now, put out your right foot," said Fred, "and slide along upon it. We will hold you fast."

So Kitty slid along and found it much easier than trying to keep upright with only Mary.

And after taking her up and down the slide several times Kitty began to see what she had to do, and though she could not go by herself she was not so timid as she had been at first.

"You only want a few more lessons," said Will, "and you will be able to go alone."

"Yes," said Mary, "I think she will, and I thank you and Fred very much for helping me."

Servia's Boy King.

Young Alexander I has annulled the constitution of Servia, which he swore to defend when he became king. Were it not that he has the army well in hand, and is therefore in a position to deal sharply with any revolt, a revolution would be probable.

History furnishes no parallel to the career of Alexander. He became king when he was 13 years old by the abdication of his father in March, 1889. The regents appointed to manage affairs for the young monarch made themselves obnoxious to Alexander, so in April, 1893, he declared himself of age and upset the regency by military force, proclaiming, in defense of his action, that the constitution was in danger.

That was a Napoleonic piece of business for a boy of 17, says Golden Days. He has now abolished the liberal constitution of 1888 and restored that of 1869, which makes the king practically an autocrat.

A Happy Land For Children.

The French have such beautiful proverbs about children that if they were lived up to French children should lead the happiest of lives. One rule for childhood is, "No cares, no fears, no tumult, no strife—all merriment." Another says that "childhood is the holiday of life," and bids parents see to it that it be made such.

The Bee and the Fly.

The Bee went a-courting
My lady, the Fly,
Said the Bee to the lady,
"For you I would die."

Said sweet Lady Fly
As she blushed 'neath her wing,
"I love your soft words,
But I hear that you sting."

Shakespeare and Bacon.

A famous historian well known personally in Boston told the following story when he was asked what he thought of the Shakespeare-Bacon controversy: "I was once librarian in a small town, and it was my custom to catalogue books on the real meaning of Daniel, astrology, modern spiritualism, etc., under the general head 'Insane Literature.' When any volume written in support of the Baconian theory appeared, I catalogued it under the same head."—Boston Journal.

It May Do as Much for You.

Mr. Fred. Miller, of Irving, Ill., writes that he had a Severe Kidney trouble for many years, with severe pains in his back and also that his bladder was affected. He tried many so-called Kidney cures but without any good result. About a year ago he began use of Electric Bitters and found relief at once. Electric Bitters is especially adapted to cure of all Kidney and Liver troubles and often gives almost instant relief. One trial will prove our statement. Price only 50c. for large bottle. At R. R. RAILROAD TIES.

There are 9,916 miles of railroad in Austria, with 76 different proprietors.

About two-thirds of the railroads of the country do not pay their stockholders anything.

A railroad club has been organized in Chicago. H. C. Tucker of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad is the president.

The eastern hemisphere, on which dwell 92 per cent of the population of the world, has 170,793 miles of railroad, or 46 per cent of all railroads.

The Chicago and Eastern Illinois is paralleling the tracks of the Peoria and Eastern so as to have independent access to the coal mines at Oakwood.

With the completion of the street railway line between Lowell and Haverhill, Mass., a line of 42 miles is made, becoming what is claimed to be the longest continuous street railway in the country.

The Buffalo, Attica and Arcade railroad will change its gauge from narrow to standard, permission having been granted by the state railroad commissioners. This will enable the road to enjoy an exchange of rolling stock with all other railroads.

Warned In Time.

"William," said Mrs. Youngwife from the head of the stairs to her husband, who had come home at an early hour in the morning, "there is some of my home-made cake in the pantry, a new kind that I made today. I put it where you can easily find it."

"All right, dear," responded Mr. Youngwife. "How considerate of you! I might have eaten some of it without thinking." And the grateful husband made a supper of cold beef.—Philadelphia Times.

THE FAMILY TREE.

Captain Craik was the proudest man in America. He had served creditably in the war of 1812, as his father had in the Revolution and his grandfather in the "Old French war"—all captains who had never received a scratch or once encountered the vulgar smell of gunpowder.

That none of his name had ever risen above the rank of captain was a circumstance he not a little plumed himself upon. Generals and commanders-in-chief, he was accustomed to say, were for the most part parvenus, promoted through luck or for accidental reasons. But a captaincy running in a family for three generations was quite another affair.

Family pride was the captain's specialty. How far back he could trace his kindred nobody exactly knew, but it was popularly believed he could, if so minded, produce satisfactory proof that the Craiks had cruised through the flood in their own private yacht.

The captain hated the new and worshiped the old. When he went about it was in an ancient family gig drawn by an old horse of approved extraction, now a mere pedigree in harness, but in whose spavins and windgalls the captain took almost as much pride as he did in the family gout.

Captain Craik was rich, moreover. Time and the natural rise of property had made him so. He would have scorned the acquisition of wealth by any less respectable mode. Trade he looked upon as plebeian and vulgar. Speculation was upstartish, and as for petroleum—faugh!

His daughter and only child he had left to die unforgiven and almost in want for having married a man without a grandfather. The poor girl had besought his forgiveness while her husband lived, but ceased to do so after his death, seeming to look upon such an act as a sort of treason to his memory. Her infant son, however, soon left motherless as well as fatherless, was taken into favor at last for the sake of the blood that was in him, and thus it came that Willard Spence was brought up in his grandfather's house in a way befitting the heir apparent to the handsomest fortune within 50 miles.

Captain Craik would have greatly preferred that his grandson, after finishing at college, should have sat down in gentlemanly idleness and quietly awaited his turn at the family succession. But Willard Spence had other views. He was far from sharing his grandfather's notions on the value of ancestry, and though too discreet to openly laugh at them he felt he was more than likely to run counter to them some day, as his poor mother had done, when his own time to marry came. It was for this reason partly and partly because he had an ambition to be something in his own right that Willard prevailed upon his grandfather to enter him as a student in the office of Mr. Stiles, the leading lawyer of the county.

It was with some reluctance that the old gentleman yielded. He entertained a not very exalted opinion of the bar. But then it was a stepping stone to the bench, and though the family could boast of three successive captains there had never been a chief justice in it. It was this consideration that determined the captain.

If John Stiles was the driest of lawyers, his daughter Mary was the prettiest and most fascinating of girls, and Willard Spence was not the man to be slow in finding it out. It would be the old story over to recount the steps of their falling in love and how deeply they fell in.

Willard ventured to hint to his grandfather one day, not at the state of his feelings, but what a nice, intelligent young lady Miss Stiles was. The old gentleman caught like gunpowder. He had no excuse for putting a summary end to his grandson's legal studies and packing him off on a foreign tour, for the young man had said nothing to justify a suspicion of his being in love. But the captain scented danger afar and proceeded to head such a homily on the sin of marrying into families without lineage and put such a disinheriting look on that Willard was fain to drop the subject.

If the reader has ever read Blackstone he will remember, and if he hasn't we will tell him, that in the second book there is a folding leaf called a "Table of Descents," whereon the author illustrates the mode of computing kindred by a tabular view of the ancestors and collateral relatives for ten or a dozen generations of a certain fictitious John Stiles. The names are inclosed in little circles, with lines uniting those supposed to have intermarried, whose names are further united by other lines to those of their offspring.

"I have it!" was Willard Spence's exclamation as his eye fell on this leaf lying lose in the volume he was reading one day.

That evening it was accidentally dropped in his grandfather's way.

"What's this?" asked the old gentleman, picking it up and putting on his specs.

"A paper I found in one of Mr. Stiles' books," was the innocent reply.

"Humph! A copy of the Stiles' family tree, and—stop, let me see—running back, as I live, through more generations than I supposed any man in the state could count but myself! Who'd have thought that dried up old lawyer had so much blood in him?"

"Not I certainly," acquiesced Willard.

"And see, here's the name of Baker. My maternal great-grandmother's maiden name was Baker. By Jove, I shouldn't wonder if we found ourselves related yet!"

"Nor I either," said Willard drily.

"Miss Stiles—is she very handsome?" inquired the old gentleman.

"Passably," answered the young hypocrite.

Then it occurred to the captain to lecture his grandson on the impropriety of not having returned the paper to Mr. Stiles at once. The young man defended himself with a fib, which the reader may pardon if he likes. He said the paper had dropped out of a book he brought home to read, and of course he would hand it to Mr. Stiles the first thing in the morning.

Next day Willard was sitting in Mr. Stiles' office fumbling over a lawbook and thinking of Mary when his grandfather's gig drove up. Willard wished in his heart it had broken down by the way. The thing he most dreaded was the two old gentlemen getting together and coming to explanations at present.

"Is Mr. Stiles in?" inquired the captain.

"Yes, sir," answered the office boy, ushering the visitor into the back office before Willard had time to tell the lie he had framed or tip the boy the wink.

"Good morning, Mr. Stiles," said the captain blandly.

"Good morning, captain," returned the lawyer a little stiffly. "Pray be seated."

The captain excused the stiffness. A man with a dozen generations at his back had a right to be stiff.

"I come to speak to you on a matter of importance," said the captain, taking the proffered seat.

The lawyer's face brightened at the prospect of securing a valuable client.

"My maternal great-grandmother," the captain proceeded, "was a Baker, and your grandfather"—

"Was a shoemaker," the other was on the point of interrupting, for he knew the captain's hobby and had little patience with it.

But before the word was spoken, which would doubtless have led to the explanation Willard so much feared, a cry of alarm broke off the conversation. The two gentlemen reached the front door in time to see the captain's horse and gig dashing down the street at a pace that astonished all beholders. For the first time in 20 years old Roan's blood was up, and as he tore along in a gait compounded of equal parts of canter and stringhalt it was hard to tell which rattled most, the dry bones of the horse or the rickety old gig. The question of which would go to pieces first was speedily settled by one of the hubs striking a post, which in an instant reduced the vehicle to its original elements and brought old Roan up standing, his composure completely restored, the crackers having ceased to pop.

"Who on earth did it?" roared the captain.

Willard didn't know unless it was a sandy haired boy he had just seen dodge round the corner, with a face too dirty to be recognized.

What with the excitement and the gathering up of the fragments and the arrangements necessary to get the captain and old Roan home, the object of the former's visit was for the time forgotten. Before he found an opportunity to renew it a severe attack of gout laid him up for a season. Meanwhile Willard pressed his suit. Mr. Stiles gave his consent. Mary's had already been obtained, and the "family tree" had settled all scruples with the captain, whose only regret was at not being able to attend the wedding. Whether he ever found out the true state of the case is more than we can tell. If he did, he said nothing, for Mary's loving grandchildren soon completely won his proud old heart, and when little great-grandchildren began to prattle about his knees it wouldn't have made much difference what he found out.—Exchange.

Highly Humorous.

An American who has been traveling in England declares that he has seldom found the average inhabitant of London inclined to be discourteous. As a rule, any information asked by a stranger is given freely and kindly. But you must not expect an Englishman to forego an opportunity to make a good, robust British joke.

On one occasion the traveler happened to be in the neighborhood of Millbank prison and fancied that he would like a glimpse at that famous place of detention.

"Can you tell me the way to Millbank?" he asked of a stout tradesman whom he met.

"Aye," answered John Bull. "Knock me down and rob me pockets, and you'll soon enough be on the straight road there!"

Then, without vouchsafing any further information, he passed on, with a chuckle.—Youth's Companion.

Stopped the Poaching.

A Scotch gentleman, plagued by poachers, procured a cork leg dressed in a stocking and shoe and sent it through the neighboring village by the town crier, who proclaimed that it had been found in a mantrap the previous night in Mr. Ross' grounds, who desired to return it to the owner. There was no more poaching after that.—Pick Me Up.

Ancient Steelyards.

The steelyards found in Herculaneum are constructed on exactly the same principle as those of today, with a pan and a bar, with a graduated scale, along which a weight was moved. The weight was of metal and commonly represented a human head, sometimes the head of a deity, Mercury being the most popular.

Forestalled.

A London jeweler, quoted by Henry Vizetelly in his "Glances Back Through Seventy Years," says that Lord C. came into the shop one afternoon, accompanied by a footman who bore a small case of green baize. Lord C. announced that he wished to have a few words with the jeweler in private and was conducted upstairs. He carried with him the green case.

"This case," said his lordship when the two men were together, "contains the jewels worn by Lady C. on high days and holidays. At present her ladyship is in the country, where she is likely to remain for several months until the next season begins. Now, what I want you to do is to make me an imitation set precisely similar to the originals, only, of course, with false stones. Lady C. is no judge of such things and will never discover the difference.

"You can retain the originals and dispose of them among your customers, allowing me the difference in value between the two sets. But I must ask you to let me have the larger part now, as I have a pressing necessity for money."

The peer took out a key, unlocked the box and produced the jewels. The jeweler looked at them and answered:

"My lord, it is the simplest thing in the world to match these jewels in the way you suggest, but I must inform your lordship that the difference in value between the two sets would not be a penny. The present jewels are counterfeit. I purchased the originals from Lady C. more than two years ago and made her these imitations, which are such excellent ones that I am not at all surprised at their deceiving such an excellent judge of jewels as your lordship."

There was no more to be said, and his lordship withdrew.

MAKING TURPENTINE

AN EXTENSIVE INDUSTRY IN CERTAIN SOUTHERN STATES.

How the Trees Are Tapped and the Resinous Gum Gathered—Departments and Divisions In the Work All Under the Keen Eye of the "Rider."

Dialect writers find a fruitful field among the "Tar Heels" of the Carolinas, Alabama and Georgia. In the cool depths of the turpentine woods, with the gashed trees yielding up their resinous gum, the balmy air and the picturesque "hackers," "dippers" and "scrapers," with the ever vigilant "rider" watching everything, is a phase in southern life which has long been the delight of authors and the pleasure of artists. The crudity of the implements and the stills used in making turpentine and rosin lend additional interest to this old industry, and the gypsylike habits of the turpentine makers add to their ragged, illiterate charms.

Turpentine is the distilled gum of the pine trees of North and South Carolina, Alabama, Georgia and part of Florida. The season begins when the first spring sap rises and ends when cold weather checks the flow of the tree's blood. In January or February the "hacker," with his keen bladed ax, begins the round which ends with the season. He is the expert of the woods and knows his trees and just how much hacking they will stand. His task is to cut the "boxes" in which the thick gum of the wounded tree will collect. A box is a wide incision about six inches deep, a wedge shaped cut in the tree, and he hacks from 90 to 100 boxes a day. The first boxes are cut near the roots of the tree, and they are cut as close together to the height of a man's head as can be done without killing the pine. The hacker leaves a width of bark between each box so as to preserve the vitality of the tree. When the trees are leased to the turpentine makers, the terms of the lease limit the number of boxes to each tree, but when it is desired to work the pine to the fullest extent the gashes are carried up to a height of 20 feet or more.

After the hacker comes the man who "corners" the boxes. This "corner" is a cut in the top of the box to guide the sap into the cavities left for the gum, and the man who "works" the "crop" goes systematically from box to box, starting the sap anew with fresh incisions, working in this way 10,000 boxes during the season. The sap or gum fills the boxes with a clear, sticky, thick finid, and this is removed by the "dipper." Scattered through the woods are barrels in which the "dipper" deposits the gum, which is then hauled to the still. About a quart of sap is taken from each box by means of the trowel shaped scoop used by the dipper, and then the hacker comes along and starts the flow afresh by wounding the tree again. The turpentine maker watches his men closely, for the Tar Heels are an easy going people and require to be urged by the "rider," who goes through the woods on horseback examining the crop, hurrying the dippers and hackers and sending the barreled gum to the still.

The first or "virgin" sap which flows in the spring makes the best rosin, and the poorest is the product of the hardened gum which is left on the sides of the boxes when the sap "turns down" in the fall. This is removed by the "scraper," who moves through the woods with his scraping tool, gathering the leavings.

The still is a large copper vat hooded with a close fitting cover in which is a funnel which in turn is connected with the "worm" of the still. This worm runs down into another vat near at hand, and in this vat the fumes or vapor of the heated gum is distilled into turpentine. Fire under the copper vat heats the gum, and the volatile parts rise to the funnel, pass into the still and are condensed by the water in the second vat into spirits of turpentine. The residuum left in the vat is the rosin of commerce, which is passed through a series of strainers and sieves to the barrels, which are made on the spot. The turpentine, however, cannot be barreled so easily, for it will work through an ordinary barrel. It is placed in white pine barrels which have been coated inside with several coats of strong, hot glue until the barrel is impervious to the subtle fluid.

The trees are worked for five or six seasons, and then the turpentine maker moves to another part of the woods. He started in North Carolina, crossed over to South Carolina and is still moving toward the gulf. Forest fires destroy the pines faster than the hacker does, for the flames sweep over large areas before they die out. Careful owners of turpentine woods have the pine straw and fallen underbrush raked away from their trees before the season begins, and collecting this material in some safe spot wait for a quiet day when no wind will cool the wet finger, and then they burn the rakings.

Negroes are common laborers of the turpentine woods, but white men are plentiful. They live in rough shanties in the woods, with the stables for the mules and horses near at hand. No work is more healthful than turpentine making, for it is all out of doors in the depths of the balmy, health giving pines, free from the malaria of the swamps and from sudden changes of weather.—Chicago Record.

Horsepower.

The difference between nominal, indicated and effective horsepower often puzzles people. Nominal horsepower is an assumed quantity, used for the convenience of makers and buyers in describing the dimensions of the engines. Indicated horsepower is the amount shown by computations of the indicator diagram. Effective or actual horsepower is the work an engine can do or the difference between the indicated horsepower and the horsepower required to drive the engine when unloaded.—New York Tribune.

Congratulated.

Some years ago a theater in Chicago was under the management of an impecunious speculator so chronically unfortunate that he felt uncomfortable unless he was examined in supplementary proceedings twice a week. Business had been worse than bad, and he was standing one day in front of his theater watching four sheriffs carting away all the orchestra chairs, which had been seized for debt.

Nat Goodwin, who was passing at the time, rushed across the street, seized the manager's hand and exclaimed, "My boy, I congratulate you."

"Congratulate me?" sulkily exclaimed the manager. "What do you mean?"

"Why," said Goodwin, "this is the first time I ever saw all your seats taken."—Truth.

Positive Evidence.

She was young, golden haired and spectacled. He was young, smooth faced and spectacled. Likewise his clothes were brand new and his coat of the frock variety. Their fellow passengers on the chair car suspected them of being newly married, but there was a difference of opinion.

Obviously the couple were too well bred to betray themselves by any open demonstration of affection. Still there was that brand new look about them and their evident, if quiet, devotion.

"You bet your life," said the youth with the new russet shoes to the select coterie in the smoking room, "she isn't that chap's sister. If she was, he wouldn't have stuck to her all the afternoon. He'd have been out here with us fellows by this time."

"Yes, I guess they're man and wife," said the man who got on at Albany, "but they don't behave as if they were only just married. Let's ask the coon. He'll know."

The buffet man, on being appealed to, responded promptly: "Yes, sah. Jest married dis morning."

"How do you know, George?" asked the man who got on at Albany. "Did they tell you?"

George sniffed contemptuously. "Didn't need to tell me, sah. Found it out foh myself. Served 'em with lunch jest now, and he didn't know how many lumps of sugah she took in her tea. Had to ask her."—Buffalo Express.

These We Have Always.

A critic suggests that a mass meeting of dramatic critics be called to protest against the further use on the stage of the subjoined expressions:

"You will learn to love."

"Listen [music], and I will tell you the story of my life."

"He was the only man who ever spoke a kind word to me."

"Papa, kiss mamma."

"I must tell you one thing before I go—not very much to you perhaps, but to me everything—I love you."

—BUT—

The Great And Only

ENCYCLOPAEDIA Britannica.

Complete in 25 Volumes

The Encyclopædia Britannica is not only a complete compendium of all knowledge, but it is a dictionary of biography, a record of inventions, a history of discoveries, a calendar of dates, a registry of events, a glossary of technical and scientific terms, a collection of mathematical, chemical, and mechanical formulas, a handbook of law, a medical guide.

Best At'as in the World.

The most thorough and reliable key to business knowledge, a manual of games, sports and amusements, a theranus of statistics, a history of all countries and people, a storehouse of criticism, a treasury of curious learning, a vade mecum for the household and farm, as for the office and library, a repertory of useful information. If the professional or the business man should undertake to put upon his library shelves the special treaties, which would cover as wide a range of topics as those gathered in the Britannica, relating to his own pursuits, his purchases would extend over scores of volumes, some of them rare and expensive, and many of them not brought down to date.

Of all the works of reference now in the market, the Encyclopædia Britannica is not only the most comprehensive, but by far the cheapest, even at

The Original Price of $8 Per Volume.

Heretofore this work could be obtained only at a great cost—from $125 to $300. It is now, for the first time, placed within reach of the masses. A saving of only 15 cents a day gives you this never-failing fountain of knowledge. Is it not worth such a slight effort to obtain it?

The STAR will for a short time furnish this great work in Cloth binding at $1.60 per volume; in full sheep at $2.20 per volume, and will deliver the whole set upon payment of $5 cash, giving you long time to pay the balance.

The purchase of any Encyclopædia short of the best is not only bad judgment, but worse economy. The STAR will furnish you this, the greatest literary production of the century, at one-third the former price and on terms so accommodating that none need deny themselves the great advantage of owning this mine of information. Remember that the present is the only time we can call our own. We reserve the privilege of withdrawing this offer at any time. It is made as a favor to the STAR'S readers, and for the purpose of increasing our circulation. You are invited to call and examine the books, or send us your address for further particulars. Out of town subscribers can order by mail, and the books will be sent prepaid.

The Morning Star.

WILMINGTON, N. C.

SUNDAY MORNING, MAR. 3, 1895

MEXICAN RAILROAD WRECK.

Total Number of Deaths Seventy—Five More of the Injured Expected to Die.

By Cable to the Morning Star.

CITY OF MEXICO, March 2.—Six more persons injured in the wreck on the Inter-Oceanic railway Thursday have died, making the total number of deaths so far seventy. At least five more of the injured are expected to die. A statement made yesterday that 104 persons were killed in the accident is an error, arising out of a mistake of the El Universal in counting some of the injured among the dead.

The damage to the railway company's property is variously estimated at from $30,000 to $50,000. Many of the injured threaten to sue the company for damages. All of the dead and injured belonged to the poor class. The engineer in charge of the wrecked train has not yet been found, but the chief condutor has turned up all right. The railroad officials say the accident was caused by the tender's trucks slippling out of place.

CUBA'S REVOLUTION.

Fight with Insurgents in the Santiago District—Few Killed, Many Wounded.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

HAVANA, March 2.—The military commander at Manzanillo, province of Santiago, reports that on February 26 the troops attacked Vequita, where a strong force of insurgents was entrenched. Most of the insurgents were armed, and they held the ditch for two hours. They kept up a steady fire on the Government troops, but eventually were dislodged and dispersed. A few insurgents were killed and many were wounded.

Juan Galberto Gomez, formerly editor of the Lucha, was a member of Coloma's insurgent band, but escaped when the majority of them were captured. He was pursued by a small detachment of troops, and to-day was driven to surrender himself to the authorities of Sabanilla, province of Matanzas. Among the prisoners taken with Coloma's followers was his mistress.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

A Decline in Prices of All Products on the Chicago Board of Trade.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

CHICAGO, March 2.—The edge was entirely off wheat to-day and the buyers during the late flurry were manoeuvring to accept as little loss as possible on the property bought at somewhat higher figures. May opened 54¾@54¼c, declined to 54c, rallied to and closed at 54⅜c—¼c under yesterday. The cash market was quiet, steady and unchanged.

Corn—A half session of the stereotyped Saturday order existed in corn. The complaints of traders at the inactivity and lack of trade were general. A materially easier feeling ruled in prices. May corn opened from 45¾@45c, sold between 44¾and 45½c, closing at 44⅞@45c—¼@⅜c under yesterday. Quotations on cash corn were not altered. Business in that branch of the market was dull.

Oats—Oats were in their usual condition of stagnation. The very moderate business was transacted at prices averaging slightly under those of yesterday. The weaker tone was derived from wheat and corn. May closed ¼@¼c lower than yesterday. Cash oats were quiet and unchanged.

Provisions—A dull and uninteresting day was passed in this product. The packers were holding off, whilst scalpers believed that moderate returns were to be had on the bear side, and to that end sold small quantities. The hog market was steady, which fact sustained values temporarily at the opening, but later they eased off slightly all around. At the close May pork was 2½@5c under yesterday, May lard and May ribs each 2½c lower.

The banks now hold $28,054,500 in excess of the requirements of the 25 per cent. rule.

SPOTS AND FUTURES

Total Visible Supply for the World—The New York Sun's Review of the Cotton Market.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NEW YORK, March 2.—The Sun says: The total visible supply of cotton for the world is 4,794,719 bales, of which 4,473,519 are American, against 4,393,490 and 3,835,220 respectively last year. Receipts of cotton this week at all interior towns 89,141 bales. Receipts from the plantations 117,908 bales. Crop in sight 8,497,576 bales.

NEW YORK, March 2.—The Sun says: Cotton advanced 6 to 7 points and closed firm, with sales of 47,700 bales. Receipts at the ports for the week are estimated at 110,000 to 150,000 bales. The port receipts to day were 20,663 bales, against 8,185 last year. Liverpool was ⅛ to 1 point higher and closed very steady. New Orleans moved up 4 points for futures; receipts there on Monday estimated at 5,000 to 6,000 bales, against 8 484 last Monday and 5,885 last year. The Signal Service predicted warmer weather at the South. The quantity brought into sight during the past week was 146,741 bales, against 71,431 for the same time last yerr. The total in sight is 8,497,576 bales, against 6,596,446 for the same time last year. The Chronicle states that takings by Northern spinners thus far this season are 1,680,481 bales against 1,148,108 for the same time last year. The exports from the ports thus far this season are 5,186,368 bales against 4,007,966 for the same time last season. The world's visible supply is 401,000 bales larger than at this time last year, and 111,000 more than in the bumper crop of 1892. The crop in sight is about half a million bales larger than at this time in 1893.

To-day's features were: Predictions of lighter receipts next week caused covering and some advance. Besides Liverpool was higher and the spot market here was lower.

SENATE AND HOUSE.

THE LAST LEGISLATIVE DAY OF THE FIFTY-THIRD CONGRESS.

It Will be Continued by Recesses Until Monday—Fair Progress Made With Appropriation Bills in Both Houses.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—When the Senate met at 11 o'clock to-day it entered upon the last legislative day of the Fifty-third Congress, because, although the Congress does not expire till Monday next at noon, its existence till then will be continued by recesses, not adjournments. Of the eighty-eight members of the present body, sixteen will cease to be Senators at that hour, and, two others have merely a chance of survival. The sixteen are Senators Butler South Carolina; Camden, West Virginia; Carey, Wyoming; Coke, Texas; Dixon, Rhode Island; Dolph, Oregon; Hunton, Virginia; McLaurin, Mississippi; McPherson, New Jersey; Manderson, Nebraska; Martin, Kansas; Power, Montana; Ransom, North Carolina; Walsh, Georgia; Washburn, Minnesota, and Wilson, Iowa. The two whose cases were in suspense this morning are Senators Higgins of Delaware and Shoup of Idaho.

The only real pressing work absolutely necessary to be transacted by the Senate (before the close of the Congress) when the Senate met to-day was the passage of the Naval Appropriation bills The naval bill was taken up for consideration without much delay, and the discussion on various amendments to it as reported from the Committee on Appriations occupied almost all the time until a recess was taken at 6 p. m., for two hours. The discussion started on the proposition to reduce the number of additional seamen that the Secretary of the Navy might enlist in the next fiscal year from 2,000 to 1,000. That amendment was vigorously contested, but was finally agreed to—yeas 31, nays 25. Other amendments that were contested were those striking out of the bill items for dry docks and buildings at naval stations. When the recess was taken the amendment had not been reached to reduce the number of new battle ships from three to two. The committee amendment—striking out the item for guns for auxiliary cruisers—was agreed to.

An amendment to strike out an item of $80,000 for a construction and repair shop at Port Royal, S. C, was allowed to stand over at the request of Mr. Butler.

Duriug the day's session conference reports on the Fortification bill, the Agricultural and the Indian bill were presented and concurred in, but as all the disagreements on the Indian bill had not been arranged, a further conference was ordered upon that bill.

The arrest and imprisonment of two Cubans—claiming to be American citizens—for participation in the revolutionary movement in Cuba, was this morning called to the attention of the Senate by Mr. Call, who presented a telegram received by him on the subject and had it referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations; with a request on his part that the committee act promptly on the matter.

The night session of the Senate began at 8 p. m. The Naval Appropriation bill was again taken up. When the paragraph was reached as to the construction of three battle-ships—the Appropriation Committee recommending that only two be provided for—the debate on that proposition was about to startling, but was interrupted by the conference report on the Diplomatic and Consular bill, showing a continued disagreement on the Hawaiian cable amendment. Mr. Blackburn, who presented the report, moved that the Senate recede from the amendment, as there was no probability of the House agreeing to it. On that a long debate sprung up, which is still (midnight) going on. Mr. Pettigrew, Rep., argued against the amendment, while Mr. Lodge and Mr. Morgan supported the amendment and in favor of annexation of the Sandwich Islnds. Mr. Lodge declared, passionately, that rather than give it up he would prefer to have ten extra sessions. Mr. Morgan is still speaking, and is apparently good for several hours.

Conference reports on the District of Columbia Appropriation bill and the Legislative Appropriation bill were presented and concurred in.

Mr. Frye followed Mr. Morgan, advocating the Hwaiian cable proposition.

The Senate refused, by a vote of 33 to 27, to recede from its Hawaiian cable amendment.

At 1.30 the Naval Appropriation bill was again taken up and rapidly disposed of until the last and most important amendment was reached—the one to reduce the number of battle ships to be constructed from three to two. Before its being entered upon Mr. Aldrich suggested that as the amendment could not be disposed of to-night the Senate should now take a recess for an hour, to give time for the Sundry Civil bill to be received from the House and then take a recess till 11 a. m. To this proposition Mr. Gormau indicated his assent; but Mr. Peffer preferred that he should go on with the speech which he had desired to deliver against the proposed increase of the navy. Mr. Butler asked him to yield for the "Pooling bill," but he positively declined, and at 1.45 began his speech, having before him a large supply of material for it.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

The first session of the last day's proceedidgs of the House in the Fifty-third Congress lasted from noon until 6 o'clock. In that period a considerable amount of business was transacted, under the operation of the rule providing for a suspension of the rules for the passage of bills thereunder, and by unanimous consent. Measures carrying appropriations for proving claims, generally speaking, met very poor succes; either Mr. Sayers, chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, or his alert and indefatigable lieutenant, Mr. Dockery, interposing fatal objections.

Notwithstanding this was the last legislative day of this Congress, the proceedings on the floor of the House were marked by no unusual scenes of confusion, and but little delay was occasioned thereby. Among the measures that were passed by unanimous consent were the following:

Senate joint resolution to continue the present officers of the courts in the Indian Territory in office until the bill providing for the reorganization of the courts of the territory shall become a law; Senate joint resolution donating to the citizens' committee in charge of the G. A. R. National Encampment to be held at Louisville next fall, condemned cannon from which to make badges for the delegates to the Encampment; Senate bill to reimburse officers and seamen for property lost or destroyed in the Naval service of the United States.

Conference reports were agreed to upon the following bills: Giving to the widow of Rear Admiral Earl English a pension of $50 per month; increasing the pension of Hosea Brown, a veteran of the war of 1813, to $60 per month; authorizing the erection of a statue in the District of Columbia of the late Prof. Samuel Gross. M. D., of Philadelphia, and appropriating $1 500 for a pedestal therefor; the agricultural bill; a partial agreement upon the Indian Appropriation bill.

Under the suspension of the rules a bill was passed to pay the trustees of Washington and Lee University, Virginia, the sum of $17,484, for use and occupancy of the buildings of the institution by Union troops during the war. Upon this motion an interesting debate occurred, in which Mr. Reed warned the House that the Government could not afford to enter upon the policy of paying claims of this character.

Motions to suspend the rules and pass the following bills failed: To pay the trustees of Newberry College, S. C., $15,000 for the use of the buildings by troops during the war; to reimburse Representatives the amount of their salaries withheld during this Congress for absence other than those occasioned by sickness.

A concurrent resolution was agreed to, naming the Secretary of the Treasury, the Superintendent of the Coast and Geodetic Survey and the Director of the Mint as a commission to inquire into and report to the first session of the Fifty-fourth Congress as to the desirability and expediency of the adoption by the Government of the United States of the metrical system, and also as to the prospect of the adoption by the leading nations of the world of the metrical system of coinage, weights and measures. A resolution was agreed to, also, directing the publication of 10,000 copies of the report of the commission appointed by President Cleveland to investigate the Chicago railroad strike last Summer.

At 6 o'clock a recess was taken until 8.

The novelty of a night session drew a crowd of curious people to the Capitol. At 8 o'clock the galleries were crowded to suffocation. The night was close and humid and the air within the chamber was at times stifling, notwithstanding the frantic efforts of the doorkeepers to secure ventilation. The ladies, who formed the larger part of the audience, plied their fans vigorously and looked as uncomfortable as the patrons of a Summer opera. There was considerable confusion on the floor of the House, which was broken from time to time by the sound of the Speaker's gavel and his almost plaintive appeals that "the House will keep order." At one point in the proceedings the confusion in the galleries was so great that the Speaker threatened to clear them if it were not restrained. As the night wore on the spectators gradually returned to their homes, and at midnight the galleries were practically deserted.

EVENING SESSION.

At half an hour after midnight the House was preparing to vote upon the Senate amendment appropriating $5,000 000 under the bounty clause of the McKinley law to the sugar growers of the country. Debate on this amendment began at 10 o'clock and was conducted with great vigor on both sides.

The first business which came before the House at the evening session was the amendment in the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill appropriating $150 000 for the purchase of the Blaine property in this city. The House almost unanimously refused to concur. The amendment creating a retired list for the officers of the revenue cutter service met a like fate. The amendment appropriating $125,000 for the heirs of the Ford's theatre disaster victims was agreed to.

The conference report on the District of Columbia Appropriation bill was agreed to, also conference report on the Legislative, Executive and Judicial Appropriation bill.

NEW YORK, March 2.—Treasury balances: Coin, $88,756,000; currency $78,839,000.

When a vote was reached the House reeceded from its disagreement to the Senate amendment to pay the bounty—yeas 133, nays 124; present and not voting 3.

The conferees on the Legislative, Executive and Judicial Appropriation bill have reached a full agreement. The House accepts most of the Senate amendments and the Senate recedes from its amendment for the establishment of a classification division in the Patent office.

The partial report on the Sundry Civil bill made this evening shows that in this the most important of the thirteen annual appropriation measures, the Senate has carried the day on the great majority of minor amendments made to the bill. The items of disagreements will be further insisted upon by the two Houses, and another conference will be ordered. The conferees will be engaged on this matter probably the better part of the night.

The House agrees to the Senate amendments providing for the erection of public buildings authorized by law, with some amendments in several cases.

The confeeres on the Deficiency Appropriation bill will not meet until to-morrow. The House conferees are Messrs. Breckinridge, of Kentucky; Sayers, of Texas, and Cannon, of Illinois. The two latter gentlemen are also on the Conference Committee on the Sundry Civil bill, and until this is disposed of they cannot act on the deficiency bil.

FLOUR MILLS BURNED.

Total Loss $300,000—Two-Thirds Insured, By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

BETHALTO, ILL., March 2.—Fire started in the Kauffman mill here this morning. It spread with great rapidity, and soon an explosion occurred. The large elevator adjoining the mill was in flames in an hour, and is a total loss. The flames then spread to another flour mill adjoining the elevator, and at 9 p. m. that was reduced to ashes. The fire was under control at 3 p. m. The elevator destroyed contained 4,000 bushels of wheat, and a large warehouse filled with flour was saved with great difficulty. It is believed that the fire was caused by an explosion of flour-dust. Thomas Scott, a mill employe, had an arm broken and was otherwise badly injured. The total loss is $300,000 and is insured for two-thirds of that amount.

BEATEN BY WHITE-CAPS.

Two Brothers Unmercifully Whipped—One Not Expected to Live.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

WINSTON, N. C., March 2.—Thirty white-caps went to the homes of Amos and Willey Knott, in Yadkin county, and beat them unmercifully. The two brothers were gagged and tied. Each received over one hundred lashes. Amos is not expected to live. The white-caps charge the brothers with reporting many moonshine distillers in Yadkin, where the revenue officers have made a number of raids recently. The white-caps gave the two men two days within which to leave the country. The brothers say they will do so as soon as they recover from their injuries.

HONOLULU ADVICES.

The Ex-Queen Sentenced to Five Years' Imprisonment and $5,000 Fine—Sentences of Other Conspirators.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

HONOLULU, February 23.—The Executive has not yet passed upon the sentence of the ex-Queen. It is quite certain that the Military Commission made it five years and $5,000 fine. It is well understood that the Government are debating the method and place of imprisonment. A conclusion will soon be arrived at.

This morning at 9 o'clock the President's aid, Major Potter, went to Oahu prison and read to the chief prisoners their sentences as follows: C. T. Gulick, 35 years imprisonment and $10 000 fide; W. H. Rickard, 35 years and $10,000 fine; Major Seward, 35 years and $10,000 fine; Robert W. Wilcox, 33 years and $10,000 fine; T. B. Walker, 30 years and $5,000 fine; Carl Widemann, 30 years and $10,000 fine; Henry Bertelmann, 35 years and $10,000 fine; W. H. C. Grey, 30 years and $10,000 fine; Louis Marshal, 30 years and $10,000 fine; John Lane, 5 years and $5,000 fine; Wm. C. Lane, 5 years and $5 000 fine.

Gulick, Seward, Richards, Wilcox, Newlein and Bertellmann had been sentenced by the military commission to be hanged. The sentences were modified by the Commander-in-Chief as above. Newlein received his sentence at the station house. At the end Major Potter read: "And furthermore, in consideration of the fact that the Government has used you as a witness before the military comsion, the marshal is instructed to set you at large," etc. The marshal then bet Newlein at liberty. A similar appendix to the sentence was read in the case of Bertellman, and he also was set free.

CHINA AND JAPAN.

It is Believed that Li Hung Chang's Peace Mission Will Not be Successful—Russia Vetoes the Proposal of Japan to Annex Corea.

By Cable to the Morning Star.

LONDON, March 2.—There is a general feeling in the Foreign Office that the peace mission headed by Li Hung Chang will not be successful. Russia has absolutely vetoed the proposal of Japan to annex Corea, and it is understood that Japan now wants possession of the area between the Yalu and Lioa rivers, in order to form a buffer state extending to the Russian frontier of Amoor, Russian Manchuria, which now forming a part of Southeastern Siberia, was acquired by Russia from China and Japan in 1858. This move if successful would secure to Japan the withdrawal of Corea from Chinese influence, possession of Port Arthur and command of the Yellow Sea road to Pekin. Japan also asks for possession of Formosa. The details of Li Hung Chang's credentials, which will be communicated to the Western powers do not ompower him to cede either Manchuria er Formosa to Japan.

SOUTHERN R. R. COMPANY.

A New Contract Made With the Asheville & Spartanburg and Spartanburg, Union and Columbia R. R.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NEW YORK, March 2.—The Southern Railway Company has made a new contract with the Asheville & Spartanburg and the Spartanburg, Union and Columbia Railroads, controlled by John H. Inman. The two roads had been operated under a rental of $80,000. The Southern Railway has leased the roads for an annual rental of $40,000 and given the roads five thoutand shares of Southern Railway preferred and 5,000 shares of common stock. The report from Atlanta that the Southern Railway Company had purchased the roads is untrue. The roads were excluded from the Richmond Terminal reorganization by Drexel, Morgan & Co.

The Modern Invalid

Has tastes medicinally, in keeping with other luxuries. A remedy must be pleasantly acceptable in form, purely wholesome in composition, truly beneficial in effect and entirely free from every objectionable quality. If really ill he consults a physian; if constipated he uses the gentle family laxative, Syrup of Figs.

LEE'S INCOMPARABLE INFANTRY.

A Short Chapter in the History of the Second Corps, Army of Northern Virginia.

A gentleman of Wilmington who has had occasion recently to consult the "Records" concerning the famous Second (Jackson's) Corps, Army of Northern Virginia, pencilled the following summary of one month's operations of the corps under Gen. Jubal A. Early in the Summer of 1864, viz.:

From the 13th of June, 1864, to the 14th of July, 1864, Gen. Early, with the old Second Corps of the Army of Northern Virginia, numbering about 8,000, and about 5,000 additional troops, had driven out of the field the army of Hunter, 18,000 strong; had bottled up Sigel at Harper's Ferry with a force of 6,000; had defeated Wallace's army of 7,000 at the Monocacy and sent him whirling into Baltimore; had diverted from Grant's army the Sixth Corps, and a portion of the Ninth Corps, and had marched a distance of five hundred and ten miles, which for length and rapidity has no parallel in our own or any modern war.

The following North Carolina regiments were in Gen. Early's command: First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Twelfth, Fourteenth, Twentieth, Twenty-first Twenty-third, Thirtieth, Thirty-second, Forty-third, Forty-fifth, Fifty third, Fifty-fourth, Fifty-seventh, First Battalion, Second Battalion.

The Senatorial baseball team left Washington last night for Charleston, S. C., for their Spring practice.

About 6 o'clock yesterday morning a large four-masted schooner was driven ashore at Cobb Island, eastern shore of Virginia. Its name and destination are unknown. The Merritt Wrecking Company sent a steamer to her relief yesterday afternoon. The crew are reported to have been saved.

News reached Jackson, Miss., yesterday of a murder near Arding. Tom Jones, 30 years old, fired four times across a table at his father, killing him instantly. They quarrelled several days ago, and when the father came home drunk and attacked his son at supper with a fork, the tragedy ensued.

Woman's Vanity.

They were talking about the vanity of woman, and one of the few ladies present undertook a defence. "Of course," said she, "I admit that women are vain and men are not. Why," she added, with a glance around, "the necktie of the handsomest man in the room is even now up the back of his collar," and she smiled—for every man present put his hand up to the back of his neck. That proves it. We being men are no exceptions. What we are vain of, however, is this: being able to offer
